Chamber gets ready for rodeo

Rodeo time is coming up in Elk Point on May 14 and 15, and Elk Point Chamber of Commerce is again sponsoring their Best Western Decorating Contest. Elk Point businesses are urged to give their premises a 'ready for the rodeo' look for the week previous to the rodeo, with a plaque going to the winning business. This year, there will also be a prize for the Best Dressed Staff, so polish up your boots, dust off your hats and get set for the wild western week coming up soon.

Agricultural Society President Glenn Harms, Rodeo Chairman Josie Veer and committee member Charlene Baker visited the Chamber's April 20 meeting to brief the members on the upcoming event. The Rodeo Committee started planning several weeks ago, and is presently approaching businesses for sponsorship. Mrs. Veer said they are getting good response, and thanked the businesses for their support. The Lakeland Rodeo Association-sanctioned rodeo will have 7 major events, two junior events and two novice events, as well as local Junior Steer Riding, Wild Cow Milking and the Suicide Ride. Les Trach of St. Paul will be supplying the bucking stock. A rodeo dance will be held at the Fair Grounds Arena Saturday night, featuring the music of "The 8 Second Ride."

Charlene Baker added that the Ag Society is once again sponsoring a poster contest for Elementary School students. This year, the entries will hopefully be displayed outdoors at a location near the grandstand, for maximum COACH OF THE YEAR - What better time than Volunteer Week to honor Elk Point Minor Hockey's Coach of the Year? Peeewe Coach Doug Bassett received this designation, sponsored by 3M Corporation, at the Minor Hockey Association Annual Meeting, April 18. In presenting the award, Association President Doug Callbeck said that Bassett "goes above and beyond" the criteria for the award, even to the extent of hosting the team in his home for a pasta dinner and Don Cherry videos. Congratulations to a very deserving member of Elk Point's minor hockey program.

Town hosts annual meeting

Sixteen Elk Point ratepayers turned out to hear reports on the past year's operations from Mayor Ed Buck and his remaining four Councillors, Mae Hendrickson, Vern King, Dan Povaschuk and Bill Schuhmacher, at the Town's 1994 Annual Meeting.

Mayor Buck reported "a trying and interesting time" following the new general reassessment. Major adjustments were made to the 1993 budget, and combined with close fiscal scrutiny, less expenses than predicted and more grant funding coming in, resulted in a $113,183 surplus. The coming year's operational budget shows no tax increases, although incoming grants have been cut severely. With the future of any grant funding being uncertain, the Town is looking at restructuring and changing the direction of Community Services to concentrate on its FCSS functions and eventually become autonomous, and is also looking at other ways to compensate for the cutbacks.

The Town's main project from the coming year will be undertaking the upgrading of 51, 52, 53 and hopefully 54 Avenues, from Highway 41 to 50 St., by utilizing provincial street improvement and federal / provincial infrastructure grants for approximately $416,000 of the estimated $590,000 project. If the Town decides to put curb and gutter at the sides of the refurbished streets, they will meet with area residents to discuss a frontage levy for this additional work which is not covered under the grants.

The Mayor said it may be necessary to share facilities and that this would require more cooperation, so "prosperity can continue in Elk Point."

Buck also asked the ratepayers' opinion on cutting Council back permanently to five members, which is its current status due to two recent resignations. The ratepayers felt that the money saved would in no way make up for the heavy workload thus placed on the remaining Councillors. It was even suggested that if only 5 members were asked for in the next election, it might be difficult to find candidates willing to take on the commitment.

Committee reports were next on the agenda.

FINANCE / PERSONNEL: Vern King - King reiterated that the 1993 hold-the-line budget had resulted in a higher than expected surplus. The shift in tax base due to the reassessment did not generate a significant increase in overall taxes. Current moves toward coping with forecasted grant cutbacks include selling the Peter Fidler Centre to the Elks Lodge for a nominal sum, in order to save the maintenance and operating costs, phasing out the recreational function of Community Services as it becomes a FCSS, and a reduction in staff, due to one retirement and changing one full time position to part time. With the resulting decrease significantly larger than the recommended 5 percent salary cuts, the Town agreed, instead, to give their employees (FCSS not included) currently making less than $35,000, a 3 percent increase to bring them more in line with the cost of living increase. King thanked the employees for their dedication, and said the 1993 surplus was "due in a large part to their efforts."

Council was asked about the low estimates for Community Services Building refurbishing, and it was noted that these were made "before the building malfunctioned." Since those estimates were obtained, a portion of the worst section of the roof has caused a ceiling cave-in, which spewed debris including chunks of rotted wood across the south-easternmost room of the structure. Annual Meeting Chairman Sid Holthe quipped that "involuntary destruction of the building has already begun."

UTILITIES: Dan Povaschuk - Last year's activities for the Utilities Committee included the setting of equipment rental rates so the Town would not offer unfair competition to private operators, patching and maintaining streets, making an agreement to supply water to the Golf Course reservoir, and contracting maintenance of the Recreation Park to the Golf Course. This latter was successful "to a large degree," Povaschuk said, and the Town and Golf Club are currently looking at an agreement for the portion of the maintenance the Club is geared to handle. The Town also purchased a new sewer lift pump, and tied in water lines at the north end of town to increase water pressure to the apartments and the northeast portion of town. "The Public Works people did a bang-up job for us," he noted.

Annual meeting

AIRPORT COMMISSION: Dan Povaschuk - Povaschuk outlined the developments regarding the on-again, off-again runway lengthening project, which at this time appeared to be on for 1994.

LIBRARY BOARD: Mae Hendrickson - Mrs. Hendrickson reported that in 1993, the library had a total of 884 members, with 508 of these being town residents. To March 31 of this year, 179 adult memberships had been collected, with 118 of these town residents. She noted that the library has a large contingent of volunteers, whose help is very much appreciated by Librarian Michele Ducek and the Library Board.

COMMUNITY SERVICES BOARD: Ed Buck - Mayor Buck said that "FCSS is a very important part of the community... even if the government didn't see it that way." The CS Board is now looking at areas of restraint, including the end of recreation grants, and a 5 percent cut in the FCSS grant. The cost of operating the present CS Centre has been $9000 to $10,000 in excess of revenues, he noted, and when the Town looked at repairs, one quote was for a whopping $150,000. Concerned for the tenants' safety, the Town agreed to give notice to the County and find alternate quarters.

With the end of recreational grants, the Town felt it necessary to end CS's recreational function, and look at forming an autonomous FCSS Board which would report to the Town once yearly and which would operate in budgeted guidelines. When faced with the choice for unconditional or conditional FCSS funding, Council voted for the conditional, which ensures that FCSS will continue.

Buck met the night before the Annual Meeting with some of the CS Centre user groups. The Parent Nursery plans to move into the Baptist Church basement, while there is a vacant Elementary School classroom available for the Playschool, which can be used until such time as it was needed for school purposes. The Ukrainain Dance Club has booked the school gymnasium for their sessions for next year. The Town will supply an office for FCSS, likely in the Town Office, where duplication of equipment, such as the photocopier, could be avoided. Buck noted that the Town Office also has roof problems, and needs attention, and said that an addition, for office and storage space, may be needed.

NORTHERN LIGHTS LIBRARY SYSTEM: Betty Callbeck - Ms Callbeck, who retained her post as the Town's NLLS representative when she resigned from Council, introduced NLLS Director Kolette Tabor, and said that 1993 was an interesting year for the System, with conversion, cataloging, personnel training underway and Marwayne becoming a new member of the System. As of January 1, 1994, non-resident fees were initiated, and Ms Callbeck forsees "very strong changes" for the balance of the year. Following a large deficit in 1993, the System has operated under budget in all categories until March 31, and currently streamlining operations to bring costs in line and to create a more focused System.

COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD: Ed Buck - Buck finds the County School Board "the most interesting board I've ever been on" and thinks that breaking the schools away from the County is an excellent move. "I'm happy Mr. Klein took that direction."

Buck outlined the formation of the new Regional School Board, which has been approved in principle by the Minister of Education. St. Paul Regional School District No. 1 will be the first of its kind in the province. The board will consist of seven members: three from the County, one from Glen Avon, two from present School District 2228, and one from Elk Point. This board will pick a superintendent, who will answer to the Department of Education.

All tax dollars for education will now go to the Province, who will distribute it to the schools according to the number of students they have. The funding will follow a student wherever they go in the province, and will end the need for tuition fees paid by one jurisdiction to another. The schools will determine their own budgets, with the assistance of a parent council which will have "a lot of say" in how the schools are run. Local boards will negotiate salaries with their teachers.

Kindergarten has been much on everyone's mind, Buck said, and the budget has been set assuming that kindergarten will go ahead, providing the 5 percent wage rollback is accepted and enrollments stay the same. However, kindergarten fees will leap from $26 to $100 per child. Transportation funding for kindergarten students has been eliminated by the Province, but the board feels they can cover it anyway.

HOSPITAL BOARD: Orest Capjack - Capjack reported on "a very positive year" at Elk Point Municipal Hospital, with removal of asbestos ceilings, replacement of the existing roof, and construction of the long awaited long term wing and renovations nearing completion.

Medical staff is still 2 in number, but two more are being interviewed and it is hoped that one or more can be encouraged to start a practice here. Some staff reductions took place last fall, due to the construction and to retirements, however the board plans to rehire some of the laid off staff when the new wing opens. This wing has been in the planning stages since 1985, and will be opening the latter half of June.

Capjack reported that Elk Point is now in Region 11. Appointments will be made to the new regional board, and Marvin Bjornstad will submit his name as a possible member for this board. The present board asked for the Town's support of Bjornstad's application. The present board will cease to exist when the new board comes into being.

GET FIT FOR SOFTBALL SEASON

Shelagh Clarke
SPD Level II

Softball is one of the most popular sports in North America. In the US alone, up to 40 million people play each year.

Despite the "non-contact" nature of the game, countless recreational athletes are injured each year. These injuries are, at times, caused by acute trauma. The majority of these injuries however, are a result of overuse precipitated by poor conditioning.

Common injuries in softball include shoulder and elbow tendonitis; strained hamstring, quadriceps, and calf muscles; and sprained ankles and knees. With proper conditioning prior to and during the season, most tendonitis and strained muscles could be prevented or minimized. Since most knee and ankle injuries occur while base running (or sliding, if allowed), these skills should be practiced so that technique is improved. Baseball cleats should be worn only if conditions are very muddy or slippery. The use of "Safe-T-Base" on first base is recommended to decrease tripping and collisions.

If any players have had previous injuries or serious pathology, they should consult a physician prior to training. Softball players who are sedentary during the winter should start training 3 times a week for 6 weeks prior to practice season to prepare themselves physically. Those workouts should include an aerobic component such as exercise, bike, stair machine or jogging to improve leg strength and cardiovascular

Community services volunteers honored

Elk Point Community Services honored their many volunteers during National Volunteer Week with a special celebration luncheon last Thursday. Seventeen volunteers, who assist with such services and programs as Meals On Wheels, LEARN, Income Tax Assistance, Playschool, Parent Nursery, Participation and the Terry Fox Run, or serve on the CS Board itself, were entertained by CS Director Terri Ehlert and her assistant, Daphne Schnurer.

Ms Ehlert warmly thanked all the Community Services volunteers and told them that their efforts "are noticed and appreciated." We really depend on you." She noted that Community Services is currently undergoing changes in structure and will concentrate mostly on its FCSS functions. While this may eliminate some functions, it will give more time to concentrate on the FCSS programs, such as Playschool, Parent Nursery and Meals on Wheels.

Ms Schnurer provided a series of interesting contests and games, with prizes going to Morris Cooper (volunteer driver), Louis Verhagen (Income Tax), Lynn Proski (Terry Fox Run), Rose Solway (Meals on Wheels) and Charlotte Verem-Saunders (CS Board), for everything from having the most grandchildren to the youngest child.

The luncheon was a bright spot in the week for the volunteers, who know they are appreciated, but truly appreciated being told so.

Learning through the arts

Dear Editor:

We at the Elk Point Elementary School would like to take this opportunity to thank Norcen Energy Resources Ltd. for their generous contribution toward our students and staff receiving an exciting and learning experience through the arts! Quest Theatre enhanced our imaginations and entertained us with a most professional and stimulating performance on April 13. The play was entitled "Gulliver's Travels" and tells the tale written by Jonathan Swift which was adapted by Rick McNair. As always, Quest continues to offer top notch stories and portray their talents through drama with expertise so the youth (and adults) can better understand many of life's morals and values, and leave us with a sense of wonder, happiness and fulfillment!

Norcen has once again given us a chance to dream with an end result of positive motivation to dig deeper into the wealth of knowledge in literature and art, so maybe some day, we too may give back our own contributions to the arts!

Thanks again,

Sincerely,
Don Bury

The family forum

Jim MacLellan

At a recent meeting of eminent community workers, it was largely agreed that a healthy family communicates!

A policeman pulled over a woman driver. He said, "When I saw you coming down this street, I said to myself, 'forty-five - at least.'"

Replied the woman, "Well, you're a long way off! It's this hat that makes me look so old!"

Unless understanding occurs, you have not communicated. Talking does not insure understanding. Writing does not insure understanding. Understanding occurs only when all these six elements are saying the same thing:

1. What you intend to say
2. What you actually said

3. What the other person hears

4. What the other person thinks they heard

5. What the other person says

6. What you think the other person said.

When all six are saying the same thing - you have communicated.

Someone has said, "Nothing is impossible when there is good communication." Good communication is essential for getting a job done - together - and effectively. It's not easy to line up all six factors. The next time you have an important dialogue... ask yourself, "Did we communicate?"

Chamber gets set for rodeo

viewer enjoyment. Elementary students will also receive rodeo passes again this year.

Several suggestions for further joint promotions were put forth. The Rodeo Committee is interested in getting other groups involved in the rodeo week activities, and Mrs. Veer emphasized that "we do need support from outside groups to make it work. We could have an excellent rodeo week." President Harms agreed that "it's something we all can get involved with."

Chamber President Victor Stepa recognized the efforts of the hard-working Rodeo Committee, and wished them all the best with their third annual event.

Looking even further ahead, the Chamber agreed to once again sponsor the Canada Day Pancake Breakfast. Dave Yake's committee is working on plans for a portable pancake grill to be owned by the Chamber, which can be used by a variety of businesses and groups in the community, as well as for the annual breakfast.

Vern King reported on behalf of St. Paul - Smoky Lake Community Futures that their Export Catalogue, which will give wider exposure to local crafts and exportable services, now has 75 advertisers and will go to press May 15. There is room for a few more items, and potential advertisers may contact Lana Foster at Community Futures in St. Paul.

Ms Foster reported that Team Tourism funding is available for Lakeland Tourist Association members, with a May 31 deadline.

The Chamber's Economic Development Committee, which has not yet had the opportunity for a meeting, announced that there are a number of new businesses which have opened or changed ownership in recent weeks, and while they aren't taking credit for this, they are glad to see the upswing in activity.

A palliative experience

Gloria Berg

Palliative is a term used to describe the care given a person when terminally ill. It means 'to extenuate - to lessen or render less painful.' Cancer is the most common illness associated with palliative care. And - cancer is the most feared disease.

With that, I would like to share some thoughts and feelings in this regard. From a small child of only 5 years old, I came to know what it was like to live with the threat of cancer. As a young woman of 28 years, my Mom experienced what would be an ongoing battle with cancer. With a young family of six children she was determined to overcome this challenge, and with many difficult days, did so. Her strength and will and love of life prevailed and she became the victor. Life went on as usual and we did not dwell on the dying aspect - but rather on living.

Five years later, the cancer returned and with me being older and that much more aware, it was even more threatening. However, there was work to be done and we all pulled together in a strong support system. And again, one stayed focused on living and on the family unit. And once again, she conquered the cancer.

Some twenty years passed and ongoing changes occurred within all our lives. Cancer returned to my Mom (56 years old) two years ago. She underwent two major surgeries back to back and chemotherapy followed. She rebounded remarkably well and with her medical history, she left the medical society baffled. A woman who had endured three primary cancers was still energetic and full of fight. She knew there is a God and she was determined to cram a lifetime of living into what time she had left. And enjoy she did! She danced and travelled and saw perhaps more than most of us will.

The cancer advanced just this past summer and while undergoing radiation treatments, a complete blockage in the abdomen forecast the most feared result - Death. Doctors felt that death was perhaps hours or at the most, a few days away. However, she was able to span that fate into 6 weeks. The family pulled together and administered the palliative care to her in her own home.

With emotions running high and shy on sleep, one experienced many feelings and there were some difficult times. We were blessed with a wonderful doctor who supported our decisions on having Mom home and who shared the same values on death and dying. He accommodated the handling of medications and the trust, the support, and the information both he and the excellent Home Care nurse shared were valuable assets. Mom was on IV and was not able to eat or drink in these last weeks.

My Mom's attitude was unbeatable. She was happy to the very end, and more times than not, I found myself feeling that we were having an ongoing party. That's not to say that we didn't have our moments of emotional runaways, but overall, this experience was a positive one.

To share the joys and sorrows with gentleness and hospitality builds a strength of character and I feel I have grown and benefitted from this experience. The important thing for us to notice is that every time we lose something, we are presented with an opportunity to acquire something new. With each death in our life, there is a golden opportunity for a new beginning.

I would like to add here as well, that when explaining "Grandma's" destiny to our two small children who were 8 and 6 years old at the time: our 6 year old said, "But you can die from cancer!" to which I replied, "Oh, yes, and you can live with cancer too!" And so you see - it's all in an attitude. A healthy attitude that we were fortunate to inherit from an experienced teacher - my Mom.

You see - every one of us has 100 percent chance of dying. Our society has been raised on a large part to deny the reality of death. We are slowly beginning to realize that every moment of our life is preparation for our death. From the moment of conception, each cell in our body is in the birth /growth / death process. We are a part of a continuing ongoing event.

The final page turned and "the book of life" closed on this individual - my Mom, Mary Malek - on August 31, 1993.

Grief: it's the most profound emotional pain we'll ever experience. It can strike suddenly and with devastating intensity. It grips like a vise for months, even years. It is important to have the courage to let go, the faith that will heal, and the willingness to rejoin life fully.

My Mom often spoke of the necessity and importance for each of us to carry on once she was gone and she did not fear death. She organized her own funeral arrangements and we spoke of death as if it were a part of the every day routine like brushing teeth.

We have got to advance to this acceptance of death with our loved ones, and with our own. To do so, one gains an even keener awareness and appreciation of life and I believe that from the loss of lives we've experienced, and through this opportunity of administering palliative care to my own Mom, I am learning very well, the lessons in living. One has to look inward to see your own finitude, your own beauty, and the beauty in others. Life becomes richer and fuller and material things hold less meaning. Spiritual and inner growth become prevalent and life and death and dying take on new meanings. Each experience tests us to see if we are ready for the next step. And so continues the cycle of life.

I would also like to add that I lost my Dad to a sudden death ten years ago, and since my Mom's recent death, we have lost two friends (palliative) to cancer and two others to sudden deaths. With "Living and Dying," there's "Growing and Changing" and to all those of you who do the administering or receiving palliative care or to those of you who are grieving, I would like to share this story with you in closing...

"The oyster takes an irritating piece of sand within its body and creates a glowing, radiant pearl. We can take the irritant of death within our lives every day and turn it into a jewel."

We believe that individuals have the right to die with dignity in a caring environment of their choice. We believe that patients and families need support and that our community has a responsibility to ensure that support services are available.

The services, equipment and medical supplies provided by the Palliative Care Program are funded in part by donations from individuals and community groups.

ANNUAL MEETING - A.G. Ross Operating Committee

Wednesday, May 11, 7:30 p.m. in the Horizon Room

Learn to landscape

Elk Point landscaper Andrew Ross is about to embark on his second Home Landscape Design course of 1994, offered through Elk Point Further Education on May 4, 11 and 25. He instructed a similar course to an enthusiastic group in March, with response so good that he was asked to repeat the course.

The three sessions start with analysis of the site and the homeowner's needs. Ross said this is "most important. You have to look at what you want to do in the area," whether that may be a play area for the children, an area for outdoor entertaining, a vegetable garden or other features. Then you must look at your site, "and what it says, you have to go with," taking into consideration such features as low lying areas, bad soil, hot and sunny spaces, or shady spots. Taking these into consideration, you may then start to implement your plan.

Next, a "quick look at design theories," such as repetition, harmony, color, or "whatever gives you feelings of calm or excitement," depending on what sort of habitat you prefer. Ross said there are a number of styles which can be chosen and adapted to the home landscaper's needs and wants.

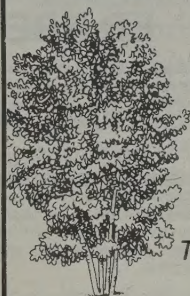

Then it is time for trees and shrubs. Ross gives course participants information on the various types for various needs, so they may decide which varieties to use to get the feeling they want.

"Filling in the rest of the yard" includes adding such features as a deck, a perennial or annual bed, paving stones, fences and retaining walls. He even gives participants a look at the new trend to xeriscaping, which utilizes rocks, mulches and groundcovers to create a unique atmosphere with a southern flavor. Xeriscaping reduces maintenance, reduces water requirements, reduces lawn areas and increases other areas "to give you a yard you don't have to feel guilty about just going and sitting in, without having to be working all the time."

Landscaping is, basically, "taking your needs and turning them into a design," Ross said. You can find out how in this three session course. For further details, contact Elk Point Further Education at 724-4101 or 724-2269.

fitness. This should be followed by flexibility exercises (ie. stretches) for the calf, hamstrings, quadriceps, hip, low back, shoulders and arms. Stretching is extremely important in preventing injuries and is best done by maintaining static 30-second stretches to pre-warmed muscles. Finally, a series of strengthening exercises for the shoulder (rotator cuff) and quadricep strength, as a minimum are recommended.

who train regularly should focus on dynamic leg strength, flexibility and maximal rotator cuff strength. Exercises such as squats, lunges, box jumps, footwork drills, "pro-fitters," and wobble-boards will enhance power, speed and coordination needed for fielding and running.

The most common problem seen in softball is that of shoulder pain with throwing. The pain is felt in the front of the shoulder and may come on gradually through the season, especially if the shoulder is not warmed up prior to the games, or if excessive throwing is done too early in the season. Occasionally it results from one extremely hard throw. Usually the diagnosis is "rotator cuff tendonitis."

The rotator cuff is a group of four small muscles which stabilize the "ball and socket" shoulder joint. They are of paramount importance in throwing, or any activity with the arm over shoulder height. Typically, repetitive movements in this range will strain them, and cause pain and inflammation in the tendons. Often the pain will be increased by lifting the arm out to the side about 90 degrees with the palm facing the floor. At this point, the thickened, inflamed tendon is being pinched between the head of the humerus ("ball") and the underside of the coracoacromial arch ("socket").

Medical advice should be sought when this condition occurs. Typically, the treatment involves rest from throwing, ice, anti-inflammatory medication, and physiotherapy. In therapy, ultrasound, laser or interferential are often used to decrease pain and inflammation. Then correct strengthening exercises are done to rehabilitate the rotator cuff muscles. When the pain has subsided, throwing may be resumed slowly, progressing gradually from short easy throws to longer, harder ones.

In order to enjoy a fun injury-free softball season this summer, now is the time to start! A program of aerobic conditioning, strengthening and shoulder strengthening now, will prevent you from spending the season warming the bench and exercising only your beer drinking muscles. Remember to always warm up before games and practices with a light jog and then stretches. Always throw easy for 5 to 10 minutes before attempting longer throws. Above all, be fit and have fun! (Source: The Sport Medicine Council of Alberta)

New books: a mixed bag

Michele Duczek
Librarian

A mixed bag of books have recently arrived at the library:

Fans of Belva Plain will be lining up to read her latest novel, Daybreak. Like previous offerings, Plain has adopted a real story for her work. A couple discover that their ailing son is not their biological child. They must cope with their son's death and with the knowledge that their biological son is alive somewhere. Even though it could devastate another family, the couple is determined to find their real son.

Terry Brooks has a new Magic Kingdom of Landover novel called The Tangle Box. Ben Holiday, sovereign of the Magic Kingdom of Landover, finds himself trapped in the Tangle Box while the evil sorcerer, Gorse, plans to enslave the fairy folk. Ben's only hope is the lady Willow who is off on a mission of her own.

The Earliest Relationship by T. Berry Brazelton and Bertrand G. Cramer has combined the expertise of two doctors into a work about newborn behavior and parent - infant interaction. Included are nine case narratives that illustrate the points made. This book is for anyone who cares for mothers and babies, and for interested parents as well.

You Don't Need a Hysterectomy by Ivan K. Strausz is not just for women who are candidates for hysterectomy. It covers a wide range of gynecological complaints. Strausz suggests alternatives to hysterectomies for many complaints, including a wait-and-see attitude to counter surgery-happy doctors.

DID YOU KNOW: Canada's first Roman Catholic Prime Minister, Sir John Thompson, was also the first and only Prime Minister to die while in office. Actually, he died in England. While dining with Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle, he took ill and died.

New business reflects past.....

STEPPING BACK IN TIME - Barb Croteau has created an exquisite replica of the way we lived "In Days of Olde," in her charming gift, antique and tea house of that name. Months of work have gone into turning a tired old house into a delightful country cottage, stocked with countless crafts, antiques large and small, and giftware with a flavor of the past. The shop, just east of 50th Street on 50th Avenue, opened early last week and already has a long list of signatures in its guest book. In addition to a great place to find a special gift or browse among the household effects of long ago, "In Days Of Olde" is the ideal spot to stop for a relaxing cup of coffee or tea and some friendly conversation. You can even glance through a vintage magazine or reminisce with a look at the 1951 T. Eaton Co. catalogue while you sip. If you haven't been in yet to see Barb's collections and her imaginative decor, make sure to stop by soon.
